Santa Anna's Proclamation.

There is an expressive silence in this document on certain topics which will not be deemed less signifiant than its annunciations on others. The war with the United States is only alluded to as an effect of the anti-republican policy of Paredes, and the Ecclesiasti-cal Aristocracy by which he was sustained. The faction, as it is called, of Paredes and his adherents, are charged not only with having provoked the United States to aggrandize herself by the annexation of Texas, but with having involved "our people, (the Mexicans,) in the evils of a fearful invasion," and ACTS of the Twenty-Ninth Congress of the U. thrown the Republic into the greatest disorder for the Passed at the first session, commencing December 1, 1845. ment of a monarchy.

To be your cateror, Ale, Porter, Stout, &c. Know ye who think that smoking's dey, I've got a bountiful supply Of Ale and Porter, fresh from London? One draught at noon, and eke at sua-down, From all the fleshly ills that plague you,-Will save Dyspepsia, Fever, Ague: Or if the Eaglish chance to fail, Close to it stands my Scotch brewed Ale-Thou sovereign Balin of Gilead, Irill! Warm'd by a pint of thee, the sick In death will renovated kick! The lame take up his bed and walk ! The blind will stare-the dumb will talk ! The old feel young, strike up a canter, liop, skip, and jump, like Tam O'shanter! Now at this host of virtues rare Should any sceptic dubious stare, Plain facts are better than debuting-"The proof of pudding's in the eating;" So to be brief, in fine I'm thinking, The proof of liquor's in the drinking!

I say it's good—who dares deny it?

I challenge all to come and try it !
